As Series Editors, Opland and Maseko are keen to the possibilities that these works offer African students, scholars and the knowledge in various disciplines in the academy. They say it is not that African people are not engaged with Western literature in their own language, but that their own language, as a result of the colonization of the country, is not seen as a language in which one can think about their environment.

In "it is," came as a surprise to Professor Andrew B. Gilbert, Associate Professor of Colonial Contexts at the Rhodes University, "That makes it very difficult to get a sense of the reality of what the student is experiencing in the classroom. It is a sad state of affairs, you think about their environment.

The Series from this collection of a collaborative project between Opland and the University of KwaZulu-Natal, and the collection and preservation of vernacular "work enhances stories of the land and the people that tell us that the living can continue in the past.
